DEPORTATIONS TO BEGIN

President Trump calls for tripling of ICE force; riots continue

Curfews extended in multiple cities

PRESIDENT TRUMP has set in motion one of his most controversial campaign promises, calling on Congress to fund a "massive deportation force" by tripling the number of federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents.

The president made the announcement in a nationally televised address last night from the Old Post Office building in Washington, D.C., now a Trump International Hotel. In a surprise move after the speech, Trump invited Attorney General Chris Christie to stand right next to him at the podium to field questions. "no_side_eye for Christie this time," tweeted Fox News Channel reporter Megyn Kelly, who was covering the speech from a sports bar near Rockefeller Center because she has been placed on a White House blacklist.

Although Trump reiterated his promise to eject some 11.3 million illegal workers on a two-year timetable — "so fast that your head will spin" — he also promised to "do it humanely." He did not immediately offer details but said he intends to flesh out the policy with special adviser George Papadopoulos, just as soon as the 2016 college grad returns from a preplanned Model UN session in Geneva.

The $400 billion deportation program promises to be one of the most disruptive government actions attempted since desegregation. Economists estimated ICE would need more than 900,000 agents to complete the deportations in the next two years.

Thousands of protesters remain camped outside the Trump International Hotel and around the fence of the White House. Singing and chanting have been audible inside the executive mansion day and night for weeks. The scent of tear gas pervades Lafayette Square. After Trump vowed to strip federal funding from sanctuary cities during his campaign, round-the-clock protests in Cambridge, Mass., shut down the Red Line temporarily, forcing scores of attendees at an elite Harvard/MIT tech-fest to evacuate Kendall Square and

Already in California, armed ICE agents confronted 30 illegal strawberry pickers on a Santa Barbara County farm and bused them to a detention center to await prosecution and a government-chartered flight back to Mexico. State officials held a press conference shortly after the raid to express concern about the economic impact if

"dishes go unwashed in the kitchens of San Francisco restaurants and if our $3 billion strawberry crop is ultimately left to rot."

Trump downplayed fears that the deportations would hurt industries that rely on illegal workers. "Don't forget... you have millions of people that are waiting in line to come into this country, and they're waiting to come in legally."

Markets sink as trade war looms

WORLDWIDE STOCKS plunged again Friday, completing the worst month on record as trade wars with both China and Mexico seem imminent.

Markets from the Dow to the FTSE to the Nikkei have sunk on speculation that China is dumping some of its US Treasury holdings after the Trump administration announced tariffs as high as 45 percent for all Chinese imports and 25 percent for some Mexican goods.

"I don't mind trade wars when we're losing $58 billion a year," the president said last year. But Chinese officials have made it no secret that they will not let tariffs go unanswered. The Asian giant is the largest holder of US debt, owing some
